1. Introduction

"The spirit of patriotism is deeply rooted in the hearts of the Chinese nation, sustaining the unity of all ethnic groups on the Chinese land and inspiring generations of Chinese children to strive for self-improvement and unremitting struggle for the development and prosperity of their country. In December 2019, a high-risk public health emergency of international concern, the New Crown Pneumonia outbreak, broke out in Wuhan. on the first day of the New Year 2020, the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China (CPC) held a special meeting to make work arrangements for the prevention and control of the New Crown Pneumonia outbreak. It was decided that the central government would set up a leading group to deal with the epidemic and work under the leadership of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau, starting a "war against the epidemic" that would bring together the whole country and solve the problem for all. General Secretary Xi Jinping asked Party committees and governments at all levels and relevant departments to attach great importance to the epidemic, mobilise and deploy in a comprehensive manner, and make the prevention and control of the epidemic the most important task at present. General Secretary Xi Jinping gave important instructions, stressing that "Party organizations at all levels and Party members and cadres must remember that the interests of the people are above all else" and "rely closely on the people to resolutely win the battle against the epidemic. [2] The important instructions given by General Secretary Xi Jinping fully reflect the Party Central Committee, with General Secretary Xi Jinping at the core,'s high sense of responsibility and great responsibility for the people's safety and security, and have injected strong confidence and motivation to resolutely win the battle against the epidemic.

2. Bringing into Play the Advantages of the "National System", the People are United in Their Determination to Fight the Epidemic

General Secretary Xi Jinping pointed out that "the people are the source of our strength. As long as we share the people's pain and suffering, and struggle in solidarity with them, there is nothing we cannot overcome.

As long as we share the hardships of the people and struggle in solidarity with them, there will be no difficulty that cannot be overcome and no task that cannot be accomplished." [3] A volunteer team is at the forefront of the battle against the epidemic, guarding our homeland with a "hard core"; a health care worker puts his life and death at risk and comes forward to fight on the front line of epidemic prevention and control; where the danger is the greatest and the hardship is the hardest, there is the figure of a Communist Party member. A bright red Party flag flew at the forefront of the battlefield, sounding the call to action and resolutely winning the battle against the epidemic. People around the world and the 1.4 billion Chinese children have witnessed China's institutional confidence and the strength of its national governance system in this new crown pneumonia epidemic sweeping the world. "The speed and scale of China's actions are rare in the world, demonstrating China's speed, China's scale and China's efficiency." [4]

2.1. The Spirit of China Manifests the Family Sentiment that the National System and National Governance System are in the Same Boat and Help Each Other

Under the correct command of the Party Central Committee, when the Party Central Committee gives an order, the 1.4 billion Chinese people "order Wuhan, a city of more than 10 million people, was closed overnight, and the whole country was looking forward to "Wuhan, go! Wuhan has survived the most extraordinary period of crisis. China took advantage of its "national system" to unite the strengths of the government and society. All walks of life contributed what they could to society and to the country, and hundreds of billions of dollars were quickly made available for epidemic prevention.

The Xin Guan epidemic was the largest medical support operation since the founding of New China. National medical resources and forces were mobilised to fully support medical treatment in Hubei Province and Wuhan City. From New Year's Eve, 24 January to 8 March 2020, a total of 346 national medical teams, 42,600 medical personnel and over 900 public health workers were mobilised nationwide to assist Hubei. [5] Community workers and volunteers went door-to-door to take temperatures and check the epidemic, working tirelessly to deliver medical treatment and medicine purchases to quarantinees to all households. Cities across the country quickly organised personnel to work overtime to deliver urgently needed medical and living supplies to the front lines of relief and treatment. According to incomplete statistics, by May 31, 2020, the number of registered volunteers involved in the prevention and control of the epidemic nationwide reached 8.81 million, with more than 460,000 volunteer service projects and over 290 million hours of volunteer service recorded. [5] 40,000 builders and several thousand pieces of machinery and equipment were mobilised from across the country to build the 1,000-bed Mount Vulcan Hospital in just 10 days and the 1,600-bed Mount Thor Hospital in just 12 days. Sixteen square-cabin hospitals with a total of more than 14,000 beds were built in just ten days. [5] All people acted to help the New Crown epidemic. As of May 31, a total of about 38.93 billion yuan of social donations and about 990 million pieces of materials had been accepted, and a total of about 32.83 billion yuan of donations and 940 million pieces of materials had been disbursed. [5] Since the epidemic, overseas compatriots, Hong Kong, Macao and Taiwan compatriots have actively donated various types of epidemic prevention materials, reflecting the cohesive power of Chinese sons and daughters around the world to overcome the difficulties together and unite to help each other.

Henan Province mobilized enterprises to donate materials worth 383 million yuan to Hubei Province. [6] 123.7 tonnes of supplies were sent from Henan to support Wuhan. [7] Party members and cadres from all walks of life, as well as those of us in Jiu San, took the lead. In the face of danger, "follow me", in the face of danger, "I'll go first". Courier boys, taxi drivers, restaurant owners and others are helping others in small ways, doing ordinary things, and many "civilian heroes" have emerged in the fight against the epidemic.

China, with its all-round, massive and powerful Chinese speed and power, has done its utmost to ensure the treatment of the epidemic in Hubei Province and Wuhan City, greatly relieving the pressure of the severe shortage of resources in the worst-hit areas. A tearful and touching scene highlighted the national spirit of our great Chinese nation with patriotism at its core, the tenacious spirit of the times and the patriotic spirit of unity and solidarity. It also shows the mobilising power of the Party Central Committee, with General Secretary Xi Jinping at its core, in terms of comprehensive coverage, cohesion and fast and efficient implementation. The Chinese spirit of "national unity" has delivered a satisfactory "Chinese answer" for all countries and people around the world.

2.2. China's Speed Demonstrates the Political Advantage of Unified Command and Leadership of the National System and National Governance System

The Decision states: "The socialist system with Chinese characteristics is a scientific system formed by the Party and the people through long-term practical exploration; all the work and activities of China's national governance are carried out in accordance with the socialist system with Chinese characteristics; and China's national governance system and governance capacity are the centralized embodiment of the socialist system with Chinese characteristics and its implementation capacity." [8] The struggle against the epidemic has confirmed the high degree of unity between the socialist system with Chinese characteristics and the national governance system. Practice has proved that only socialism can save China and only the socialist system with Chinese characteristics can develop China, and that the socialist system in China has strong superiority. "We raise the whole country to support, the organization of 29 provinces, autonomous regions and municipalities and Xinjiang Production and Construction Corps, the army, etc. to deploy more than 330 medical teams, more than 41,600 medical personnel to assist, especially more than 10 days to build; Vulcan Mountain, Thunder God Mountain, two each more than 30,000 square meters of infectious disease hospital Xun and other centralized admission hospital and square cabin hospital, do everything possible to increase the supply of beds, priority guaranteeing medical supplies needed in Wuhan and Hubei, and organizing counterpart support from 19 provinces." [9] This was Chinese speed, a great test encountered for the first time in modern history, and a great wisdom and courage unprecedented in the history of Chinese governance.

2.3. China's Strength Demonstrates the Governance Advantages of a National System and a National Governance System that is Ready to Act on Orders and Take on Heavy Burdens

"In this critical period of responding to the new epidemic, China's national system and national governance system has demonstrated its strong political advantage and self-confidence by concentrating its efforts on major issues. After the outbreak, General Secretary Xi Jinping personally took command and made preparations, and the State Council of the Party Central Committee made a comprehensive layout and national response. In accordance with the decision and deployment of the Party Central Committee, the whole country mobilised, deployed and strengthened the prevention and control of the epidemic, and all provinces activated their Level 1 responses to major public health emergencies. The series of preventive and control measures taken by China demonstrated outstanding leadership, response, organisation and mobilisation, as well as the ability to implement and execute, reflecting the temperature and speed of China, which is the power of China. It has set an example for all countries and regions in the world in combating and controlling the epidemic. According to the Director-General of the World Health Organization (WHO), Tan Desai: "The speed and scale of China's action is rare in the world, demonstrating China's speed, China's scale and China's efficiency, which we highly appreciate." [10]

The fight against the new pneumonia epidemic is a feat of patriotism in the new era, a feat that is under the leadership of the Communist Party of China and the socialist system with Chinese characteristics as the fundamental political guarantee. The general public's recognition of the Party's leadership and their confidence in the socialist system with Chinese characteristics rose to a new level. In the struggle against the epidemic, the general public in China came to understand more deeply and clearly that "socialism with Chinese characteristics concentrates the fundamental interests of the country, the nation and the people", [11] and that love for the motherland and love for socialism are highly consistent. confidence in the system and road of socialism with Chinese characteristics, and walk the well-traveled path of socialism with Chinese characteristics in the new era.

2.4. China's Temperature Demonstrates that the National System and National Governance System are Fully Committed to the Role of a Great Nation that Dares to Fight a Tough Battle

Immediately after the outbreak, the Party Central Committee set up a leading group to deal with the epidemic, sent a steering group to Hubei and issued a notice on strengthening the leadership of the Party and providing strong political assurance for winning the battle to prevent and control the epidemic. General Secretary Xi Jinping was always concerned about the prevention and control of the epidemic, and personally deployed and commanded the situation, making decisive decisions and taking command. General Secretary Xi Jinping has made many important speeches, instructions and instructions, and asked Party committees and governments at all levels to put the safety and health of the people first. General Secretary Xi Jinping went deep into Wuhan for research, came to the front line of the fight against the epidemic, went into the epidemic community, cheered and encouraged the people of the country to fight the epidemic, and cared for and encouraged the front-line staff of the epidemic prevention. He was dressed in white and marched against the clock. From academicians and experts in their old age to young medical staff in their 90s and 00s, 1.4 billion Chinese people are consciously engaged in the war against the epidemic. They are resolutely carrying out the general requirements of firm confidence, common cause, scientific prevention and control, and precise measures put forward by General Secretary Xi Jinping, and are fighting with all their might to achieve the overall goal of resolutely curbing the momentum of the spread of the epidemic and resolutely winning the battle to prevent and control the epidemic.

3. Since the Epidemic, the Central and Local Governments have been doing Their Utmost to Safeguard the Lives and Health of the People in a State of War. This has Highlighted the Extraordinary Strength of the Leadership of the Communist Party of China and the Remarkable Advantages of the Socialist System with Chinese Characteristics, and has been Acknowledged and Praised by Many Dignitaries and Leaders of Organisations around the World

The Director-General of the World Health Organization (WHO), Mr Tan Desai, said that "the speed and scale of the Chinese government's response to the epidemic is unprecedented in the world", [12] demonstrating the firm political determination of the Chinese government, the outstanding leadership of Chinese leaders and the extraordinary ability of Chinese scientists. He argues that the measures taken by China have set a "new standard" for global responses to public health emergencies. The reason for this is that China has a national system that is the envy of developing countries and breaks with European and American stereotypes. This system is superior in many ways. The main ones are a common goal that unites all the people; a governing team that contains the largest number of national elites; a popular leader at the heart of the system; a national tradition that brings out amazing energy in times of crisis; and a party spirit that always leads by example in times of crisis. "China is always well protected by their bravest men". Here, the leadership of the Communist Party of China, the superiority of the Chinese system of statehood, has played a decisive role in halting the epidemic. The Party's leadership is the strong guarantee of winning this war against the epidemic, or rather the code for our victory against the epidemic. "The key to doing a good job in China lies in the Party". This is a historically proven consensus with profound connotations. The practice of fighting the epidemic further tells us that we have to rely on the Party at critical moments. The Party's leadership is the fundamental guarantee that we can achieve all major and difficult tasks and overcome all risks and challenges.

In the face of the sudden outbreak of the epidemic, the Party Central Committee took the lead and managed the overall situation. The Standing Committee of the Central Politburo convened a meeting at the first opportunity to make decisions and deployments, put forward clear requirements, and set the general policy, tone and principles for the fight against the epidemic, demonstrating firm determination and confidence in victory, and reflecting the Party's role as the "backbone" and "anchor". The political foundation for the fight against the epidemic was laid. A leading group was set up at the first opportunity to unify the country's efforts to combat the epidemic, while a central steering group was set up to provide guidance and supervision on the front line, building a command system to combat the epidemic and laying the organisational foundation for victory.

Saving lives at all costs. We adopted a proactive, scientific and flexible treatment strategy, and made every effort to save the lives of every patient, from babies as young as 30 hours old to those over 100 years old, regardless of the cost. In order to save patients, medical staff risked infection to collect samples of the virus, and no one backed down. Since the outbreak, Hubei Province has successfully cured more than 3,000 patients over the age of 80 and seven over the age of 100 with New Coronary Pneumonia, with many critically ill elderly patients being brought back from the death line. A 70-year-old man suffering from New Coronary Pneumonia was carefully rescued by more than 10 health care workers for dozens of days, finally saving the life of the old man, with treatment costs of nearly 1.5 million yuan all borne by the state. [5] Care and concern for overseas Chinese citizens. The State is always concerned about the safety and security of Chinese nationals overseas, and embassies and consulates abroad have done their utmost to fulfil their consular protection functions, disseminating information on epidemic protection through various channels and distributing more than one million "health kits" to international students. They also assisted Chinese nationals who were in genuine difficulty overseas to return to their home countries in an orderly manner. In the name of the nation, China held a nationwide mourning event on the 4th of April, where 1.4 billion Chinese people, from top leaders to ordinary citizens, paid tribute to the martyrs and deceased compatriots with the deepest respect. The fact that China paid tribute to the deceased in the name of the nation and with the highest ceremony is a sign of the nation's respect and reverence for the individual dignity and lives of its people, and the unity and strength behind the collective sentiments of the 1.4 billion Chinese people.

In the process of global cooperation against the "epidemic", China insists on the unity of its internationalist stance and the building of a community of human destiny.

The Implementation Outline for Patriotic Education in the New Era states: "On the one hand, we should promote the spirit of patriotism, on the other hand, we should cultivate a broad-minded, open and tolerant attitude, and vigorously promote important concepts and initiatives such as adhering to peaceful development and win-win cooperation, building a community of human destiny, and jointly constructing the 'One Belt, One Road'. Inspire the general public to work together with people from all countries to create a better future." The patriotism of the Chinese nation is inclusive, and love for China and the Chinese nation is consistent with love for other countries and nations of the world in order to promote the spirit of patriotism and build a unified community of human destiny, and the unity of seeking rejuvenation for the nation and the unity of seeking a commonwealth for the world. In the new era, the Party Central Committee and the Chinese people have taken a patriotic stand, firmly defended the dignity and interests of the country in the fight against the epidemic, made every effort to protect the lives and health of Chinese citizens at home and abroad, and exposed and countered the attempts of some forces to "stigmatise" China. (1) Attach great importance to protecting the lives and health of Chinese citizens outside China.

3.1. Attaching Great Importance to Protecting the Lives and Safety of Chinese Citizens Outside China

Since the outbreak of the epidemic, the Party and the government have been mindful of the safety and security of our compatriots overseas and have attached great importance to protecting the lives and health of Chinese citizens abroad, so that they can remember that the motherland is always a strong backing for us Chinese. Specific measures include strengthening communication with the governments of the host countries, urging them to protect the health and safety of local Chinese, overseas Chinese and international students; maintaining close contact with overseas Chinese citizens, promptly understanding their demands and difficulties, and guiding them to strengthen their self-protection; effectively stepping up assistance to help overseas compatriots solve practical difficulties; caring for special groups such as overseas students, and effectively safeguarding their health, safety and legitimate rights and interests. To coordinate with foreign parties to make every effort to treat those who are abroad. Coordinate with foreign parties to provide full treatment to Chinese nationals diagnosed with infections abroad, and fully mobilize resources such as domestic experts and foreign aid medical teams to actively support and cooperate with foreign parties in carrying out rescue and treatment. Embassies and consulates abroad have done their utmost to perform their consular protection functions, disseminating information on epidemic protection through various channels and distributing more than 1 million "health kits" to international students. They also assisted Chinese nationals who were in genuine difficulties overseas to return to their home countries in an orderly manner. [5]

The international community has given China and its people invaluable support and assistance at a time when the epidemic situation in China is most difficult and dangerous. Leaders of more than 170 countries, heads of 50 international and regional organizations, and more than 300 foreign political parties and organizations have written to and called China's leaders and issued statements expressing their condolences and support,[5] reflecting the true feeling of solidarity in times of trouble.

3.2. Establish a Sense of Community of Human Destiny, Build a Better Global Home and Resolutely Oppose Stigmatization and Politicization of the Epidemic

Some foreign forces with ulterior motives are trying to create falsehoods and disinformation, attempting to pour "dirty water" on China: some politicians advocate that "the virus originated in China" and accuse China of being responsible for the worldwide epidemic; others Some have "returned the favour" by describing China's assistance to the global fight against the "epidemic" as "atonement"; others have taken issue with China's gratuitous provision of masks and other epidemic-fighting aid, and have made rumours about China's export of poor quality medical products. Others have attacked the "closure of Wuhan" as a violation of human rights and politicized the "stigma" of life safety issues. Some even labeled the new coronary pneumonia virus as the "Wuhan virus" and the "China virus". A commentary published in the Wall Street Journal even went so far as to call China the "real sick man of Asia", revealing blatant racial discrimination, etc. In the face of this wave of "planting" and "dumping", China has responded in a realistic manner, "repaying the grievance with a straightforward one", safeguarding the country's reputation and dignity. On the other hand, the Chinese government and the Chinese people have adhered to the internationalist position and, in a spirit of respect, understanding, friendliness and harmony, have actively communicated and coordinated with other countries around the world in an effort to build a community of human health, making an important contribution to the cause of fighting the "epidemic" for the people of the world.

"The mountains and rivers are different, but the wind and the moon are the same." In the era of economic globalization, human beings are living in the same global village, and are becoming a community of destiny where you have me and I have you. No country or region can be an isolated island. The outbreak of the New Crown pneumonia epidemic is global and has posed a great threat to the lives and physical health of the world's people and a huge challenge to global public health security, requiring the world to join hands to tackle it together. In a telephone call with UN Secretary-General Guterres on 12 March 2020, General Secretary Xi Jinping pointed out that "the outbreak of the Newcastle pneumonia epidemic has once again demonstrated that humanity is a community of solidarity and destiny. In the era of economic globalization, such a major emergency will not be the last, and various traditional and non-traditional security issues will continue to bring new tests. The international community must build a sense of a community of human destiny, watch out for each other, join hands to tackle risks and challenges, and build a better global home together." [13]

In order to promote global cooperation against the "epidemic", countries must establish the concept of "to establish oneself and establish others, and to attain others and attain them" (The Analects of Confucius - Yongye), from "establishing people" to "attaining people". "This is a requirement for building a community of human destiny. The more we emphasize patriotism, the more we must understand the principle of "the colder the lip, the colder the tooth" and abandon any illusion of "being alone" or "sweeping the snow in front of our own door".

3.3. China has Always Insisted on the Unity of Promoting the Spirit of Patriotism and Building a Community of Human Destiny

1. In the process of global cooperation to combat the epidemic, China has always insisted on the unity of promoting patriotism and building a community of human destiny.

First, by doing a good job in preventing and controlling the epidemic in China, China is making a contribution to the fight against the epidemic worldwide. China has taken the most comprehensive and stringent measures to prevent the epidemic, and has made the greatest efforts and sacrifices, not only to protect the lives and health of the Chinese people, but also to fulfil its international obligations in an exemplary manner, effectively preventing the spread of the epidemic beyond its borders and gaining time and experience for the world to fight the new coronavirus. The Director-General of the World Health Organization, Mr. Tan Desai, said that "the measures taken by China are not only protecting the Chinese people, but also the people of the world" [14]

2. sharing information on the outbreak and experience in fighting the epidemic with the international community.

After the outbreak of the epidemic, China was the first to take the initiative to inform the World Health Organization (WHO) and relevant countries and regional organizations of the epidemic, and regularly informs and shares information on the epidemic with WHO and relevant countries. China has conducted more than 70 exchanges on epidemic prevention and control activities with international and regional organisations such as ASEAN, the European Union, the African Union, APEC, CARICOM and the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation, as well as countries such as South Korea, Japan, Russia, the United States and Germany. The National Health and Wellness Commission has compiled treatment and prevention and control protocols and translated them into three languages, sharing them with more than 180 countries and 10 international and regional organizations around the world, and co-organizing with the World Health Organization an international briefing on China's experience in the prevention and control of neocrown pneumonia. [5] The Chinese government also co-organised an international briefing on the Chinese experience in the prevention and treatment of Newcastle pneumonia with the World Health Organisation.

3. Providing humanitarian assistance to the international community

While China is still under tremendous pressure to prevent and control the epidemic, it has acted swiftly to provide assistance to the international community as much as possible. China has provided two batches of US$50 million in cash assistance to the World Health Organization (WHO), sent a total of 29 medical expert teams to 27 countries, and has provided or is providing assistance to 150 countries and four international organizations to combat the epidemic; it has instructed foreign medical teams permanently stationed in 56 countries to assist in the prevention and control of the epidemic, provided technical advice and health education to people in the host countries and overseas Chinese, and held more than 400 online and offline training sessions. more than 400 sessions. [5] The Chinese government has also organized more than 400 online and offline training sessions.

4. effectively carry out joint prevention and control international cooperation.

While doing a good job in preventing and controlling the epidemic in China, China has also actively carried out international cooperation in combating the epidemic, extended a helping hand to other countries, shared its experience in prevention, control and treatment with the World Health Organization and the international community, cooperated with relevant countries in the development of drugs, vaccines and testing reagents, and sent volunteer medical teams to some countries, making a positive contribution to the cause of global public health. It has made a positive contribution to the cause of global public health, and has taken practical action to fulfil its commitment to building a community of human destiny, demonstrating its broad-mindedness of "the way of the world is the common good".

4. Conclusion

The socialist system with Chinese characteristics is recognized by the people as a system with strong advantages, and in the course of the great struggle against the epidemic and the promotion of the comprehensive rejuvenation of the Chinese nation, the practice of the struggle against the epidemic has further realized the seamless integration of the advantages of the system with the governance system and In the course of the great struggle against the epidemic and the promotion of the comprehensive rejuvenation of the Chinese nation, the strengths of the system have been further realised through the practice of the fight against the epidemic. The patriotic spirit of all the people, the effort to form a synergy of system and governance to break the "epidemic", the firm belief that the battle must be fought and won, the general public's responsibility and determination to build a "wall of epidemic prevention" of Chinese height and thickness with the efforts of the whole country, have made the "epidemic" fight against the "epidemic" in China. "The "Chinese system" provides theoretical support and institutional guarantee for "Chinese governance", which is a concrete demonstration of the "Chinese system". The "Chinese system" is a concrete demonstration of the "Chinese system". In this new pneumonia epidemic sweeping the world, the Chinese confidence in our system and our governance is reflected; in the face of the serious challenges posed by the profoundly changing domestic and international environment, we must always be firmly confident in our system, adhere to the "Chinese system" and "Chinese governance In the face of the severe challenges posed by the profoundly changing domestic and international environment, we must always be firm in our institutional self-confidence, adhere to the coordinated promotion of the "Chinese system" and "Chinese governance", enhance our ability to withstand major risks to the greatest extent possible, overcome the epidemic, and demonstrate the confidence of the Chinese system and Chinese institutions in the struggle against the epidemic. This valuable spiritual wealth will certainly be transformed into an inexhaustible impetus for the Chinese people to build a moderately prosperous society and achieve the great rejuvenation of the Chinese nation.
